Weeping Widow's Last Hours Beside the Inanimate Form of the Departed Husband—Flora's Choice of Gems Strewn Upon the Bier—Solemn Pageant Marched From City of the Living to the Resting Place of the Dead.

Canton, O., Sept. 19.—The streets of Canton were filled early with waving plumes, prancing horses and densely packed bodies of moving men assembling for the procession which escorted the remains of the late president from the church to Westlawn cemetery in the afternoon. All night civic, military, fraternal, social and commercial organizations from the four quarters of the compass had been pouring in, and into the seething mass of humanity already here the morning trains deposited other thousands. So fast the trains arrived, that there appeared to be one continuous string of cars unloading their human freight through the stations into the congested streets beyond.

The two sections of the train bearing members of the senate and house of representatives and other government officials from Washington arrived during the morning. Thirty special trains in addition to regular trains had arrived before noon. The biggest crowd in the history of Canton during the campaign of 1896, estimated at over 60,000, was far exceeded. The people overflowed the sidewalks and literally packed the streets from side to side. The greatest crush, of course, was in East Tuscarawas, the principal thoroughfare, and North Market street, on which are located the McKinley cottage and the Harter residence, at which President Roosevelt was stopping. The awe-stricken crowds upon their arrival moved as if by a common impulse toward the McKinley cottage, where the remains were lying.

Scenes at the Cottage. Military guards stationed at the four corners of the lawn, paced their beats, there was no other sign of life about the house of death. The window-shades were down. A long border of black which had been put in place after the body was moved to the house Wednesday night fringed the roof of the porch from which President McKinley had spoken to delegations from every state in the union, and where he had met and talked with all the chieftains of his party. No badge of conventional mourning was on the door. Instead, there was a simple wreath of palms bisected in a beautiful band of wide, purple satin ribbon. Sorrowfully the throngs turned away, the people to take up their positions at the church, the representatives to seek their places in the imposing procession which was to follow the remains to the cemetery.

The number of prominent public men in the city was augmented as every train arrived and the city numbered among its mourning guests those who are most prominent in every walk of public life. Among the arrivals were Speaker Henderson and a number of his colleagues of the house of representatives, including those who had served in the house with Mr. McKinley; Justice McKenna of the United States supreme court, who was a member of the ways and means committee when the McKinley bill was drawn; Seno Payne, present chairman of the ways and means committee; the governors of several states, together with delegates representing states, cities, chambers of commerce and innumerable civic organizations.

President Roosevelt spent a quiet morning at the Harter residence. He did not go out to the crowded street where thousands were gathered, hoping to catch a glimpse of his face, but took a walk in the spacious grounds of the residence. While at breakfast Judge Day joined him half an hour and later Secretaries Root and Hitchcock came in to see him. Many unofficial visitors left cards of respect, but the president saw very few people, preferring to remain in retirement. Among those who called were a half score of his old command of rough riders, several of them in their broad-brimmed sombreros. The president saw them only for a moment.

Mrs. McKinley's Condition. Mrs. McKinley's condition is exciting grave apprehension among those caring for her and it is feared that the dreaded collapse may come at any moment. Since she has returned to the old home, the full realization of the awful calamity has come upon her. Wednesday night after the body had been brought from the court house and deposited in the little front room formerly used as the president's library, she pleaded to be allowed to enter the room and sit beside the casket. Consent was reluctantly granted and for half an hour the stricken widow sat in the dim light beside the flower-draped bier. Then she was led away to her room. Through the morning she wept pitifully hour after hour. Owing to her condition she was able to take no part in any of the final ceremonies, neither at the church nor coming into the chamber of death when the body was borne away for the last time. From this time on she will be guarded with the most solicitous care and quiet, for it is only in this way that a collapse can be averted.

The face of the dead president was seen for the last time when it lay in state Wednesday in the court house.

At 1:20 p. m. the funeral procession started from the McKinley residence to the church, arriving there at 1:40. The body of the president was taken into the church at 1:45, and when all who were admitted were seated the services began.

SERVICES AT THE CHURCH.

Lessons From the Scriptures, Anthems and Fervent Prayers.

Canton, O., Sept. 19.—The decorations of the First M. E. church, where the funeral services were held, were elaborate and impressive. Over 4,000 yards of drapery were used. Over the front interior as the funeral party entered, covering the organ loft, there was stretched from wall to wall paneled drapery black as midnight. It was of nun's veiling, 52 feet long and 13 feet high. The panels were formed of white satin ribbons two inches wide. The choir-loft railing was richly hung with nun's veiling arranged in festoons, with silk wrappings tassels between the festoons. The pulpit rostrum was heavily covered with black cloth, and the pulpit itself was draped with rich silk crepe. An excellent portrait of the late president was fastened to the front of the pulpit and was gracefully draped. The chancel rail and all of the woodwork about the front of the church was a mass of black. Five seats from the front of the pulpit, in the left middle aisle, was the pew which was occupied by President McKinley when he attended service. It was covered with heavy black crepe. The side walls of the church were hung with streamers and the overhanging arches with black streamers and festoons. The pillars and the church auditorium proper and the Sunday school rooms were in a stately black garb, relieved every five feet with narrow bands of white silk. The balcony front was heavily draped and hung with festoons tied with white silk drapery tassels. The points of vantage on the exterior and the tower were also draped in black and white.

The services in the church were simple. They began with the rendition of an organ prelude, Beethoven's funeral march, played by Miss Florence Douds. As the last notes of the prelude were still the Euterpean quartet of Canton, composed of four young women, sang "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

The Rev. O. B. Milligan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Canton, delivered the invocation.

The ninetieth Psalm was read by Dr. John A. Hall of the Trinity Lutheran church of Canton, and that portion of the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians included between the forty-first and fifty-eighth verses was read by the Rev. E. P. Herbroutch of the Trinity Reformed church of Canton. The favorite hymn of President McKinley, "Lead, Kindly Light," was then rendered by a mixed quartet. When this hymn had been finished Dr. C. E. Manchester, pastor of the First Methodist church, delivered the funeral address.

At the conclusion of Dr. Manchester's discourse Bishop I. W. Joyce of Minneapolis delivered a short prayer. The hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung by the entire congregation. The people remained standing after the close of the hymn while the benediction was pronounced by Monseigneur T. P. Thorpe of Cleveland. The casket was then borne from the church to the funeral car, and the procession to the cemetery began.

BORNE TO THE GRAVE.

Funeral Pageant Which Performed the Last Sad Offices.

Arriving at the cemetery the casket was mounted on supports beside the walk and at the entrance to the receiving vault until the last concourse had marched by. Then the remains of William McKinley were consigned to the vault there to remain until the final burial place is constructed. A guard was placed about the vault which will be maintained night and day until the final interment.

FUNERAL SERMON.

Loving Tribute of Pastor of Church Where McKinley Worshipped.

Canton, O., Sept. 19.—Following is the address of Rev. C. E. Manchester, in the church:

Our president is dead! The silver cord is loosed; the golden bowl is broken; the pitcher is broken at the fountain, the wheel is broken at the cistern, the mourners go about the streets. One voice is heard—a wail of sorrow from all the land for the beauty of Israel is slain upon the high places. How are the mighty fallen! I am distressed for thee, my brother. Very pleasant hast thou been unto me.

Our president is dead! We can hardly believe it. We had hoped and prayed and it seemed that our hopes were to be realized and our prayers answered when the emotion of joy was changed to one of grave apprehension. Still we waited for we said: "It may be that God will be gracious and merciful unto us."

It seemed to us that it must be His will to spare the life of one so well beloved and so much needed. Thus alternating between hope and fear the weary hours passed on. Then came the tidings of defeated sciences, of the failure of love and prayer to hold its object to the earth. We seemed to hear the faintly muttered words: "Good bye all, good bye, it's God's way. His will be done," and "Nearer My God to Thee." So nestling nearer to his God, he passed out into unconsciousness, skirted the dark shores of the sea of death for a time, and then passed on to be at rest. His great heart had ceased to beat. Our hearts are heavy with sorrow.

A voice is heard on earth of kinsfolk weeping. The loss of one they love; [keeping] But it has gone where the redeemed are [a festival above.] The mourners throng the ways and from the [The funeral bells toll slowly.]

But on the golden streets the holy people Are passing to and fro, And saying as they meet "Rejoice, another, Long waited for is come: The Savior's heart is glad, a younger brother Has reached the Father's home."

The cause of this universal mourning is to be found in the man himself. The inspired penman's picture of Jonathan likening him unto the beauty of Israel could not be more appropriately employed than in chanting the lament of our fallen caelestain. It does no violence to human speech, nor is it fulsome eulogy to speak thus of him, for who that has seen his stately bearing, his graces and manliness of demeanor, his kindness of aspect, but gives assent to this description of him? It was characteristic of our beloved president to meet him only to love him. They might indeed differ with him, but in the presence of such dignity of character and grace of manner none could fail to love the man. The people confided in him, believed in him. It was said of Lincoln that probably no man since the days of Washington was ever so deeply imbedded and enshrined in the hearts of the people, but it is true of McKinley in a larger sense. Industrial and social conditions are such that he was, even more than his predecessors, the friend of the whole people. A touching scene was enacted in this church last Sunday night. The services had closed. The worshippers were gone to their homes. Only a few lingered to discuss the sad event that brings us together today. Three men in working garb of a foreign race and unfamiliar tongue entered the room. They approached the altar, kneeling before it and before his picture. Their lips moved as if in prayer while tears furrowed their cheeks. They may have been thinking of their own King Humbert, and of his untimely death. Their emotion was eloquent, eloquent beyond speech, and it bore testimony to their appreciation of manly friendship and of honest worth.

It is a glorious thing to be able to say in this presence with our illustrious dead before us that he never betrayed the confidence of his countrymen. Not for personal gain or pre-eminence would he mar the beauty of his soul. He kept it clean and white before God and man and his hands were unsullied by bribes.

"His eyes looked right on and his eyelids looked straight before him."

He was sincere, plain and honest, just benevolent and kind. He never disappointed those who believed in him, but measured up to every duty, and met every responsibility in life grandly and unflinchingly. Not only was our president brave, heroic and honest, he was as gallant a knight as ever rode in the lists for his lady love in the days when knighthood was in flower. It is but a few weeks since the nation had looked on with tear-dimmed eyes as it saw with what tender conjugal devotion he sat at the bedside of his beloved wife when all feared that a fatal illness was upon her. No public clamor that he might show himself to the populace, no demand of a social function was sufficient to draw the lover from the bedside of his wife. He watched and waited while we all prayed, and she lived. This sweet and tender story all the world knows and the world knows that his whole life had run in this one groove of love. His was a strong arm that she leaned upon and it never failed her. Her smile was to him more than the plaudits of the multitude and for greeting his acknowledgements of them must wait. After receiving the fatal wound, his first thought was that the terrible news might be broken gently to her. May God in this deep hour of sorrow comfort her. May His grace be greater than her anguish. One beauty in the character of our president that was as a chaplet of grace about his neck was, that he was a Christian. In the broadest sense of the word, that was true. His confidence in God was strong and unwavering. It held him steady in many a storm, where others were driven before the wind and loosed. He believed in the fatherhood of God and in His sovereignty. His faith in the gospel of Christ was deep and abiding. He had no patience with any other theme of the pulpit discourse. "Christ and Him crucified," was to his mind the only panacea for the world's disorders. He believed it to be the supreme duty of the Christian minister to preach the word. He said: "We do not look for great business men in the pulpit, but for great preachers."

It is well known that his Godly mother had hoped for him that he would become a minister of the gospel and that she believed it to be the highest vocation in life. It was not, however, his mother's faith that made him a Christian. He had gained in early life a personal knowledge of Jesus which guided him in the performance of greater duties and vaster responsibilities than have been the lot of any other American president. He said at one time, while bearing heavy burdens, that he could not discharge the daily duties of his life but for the fact that he had faith in God.

William McKinley believed in prayer, in the beauty of it; in the potency of it. Its language was not unfamiliar to him and his public addresses not infrequently evidenced the fact. It was perfectly consistent with his life long convictions and his personal experiences that he should say as the first critical moment after the assassin approached, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done;" and that he should declare at the last: "It is God's way; His will be done." He loved grandly; it was fitting that he should die grandly. And now that the majesty of death has touched and calmed him, we find that in his supreme moment he was still a conqueror.

My friends and countrymen with what language shall I attempt to give expression to the deep horror of our souls as I speak of the cause of his death? When we consider the magnitude of the crime that has plunged the country and the world into unutterable grief we are not surprised that one nationality after another has hastened to repudiate the dreadful act. This gentle spirit who hated no one, to whom every man was a brother, was suddenly smitten by the cruel hand of an assassin and that too, while in the very act of extending a kind and generous greeting to one who approached him under the sacred guise of friendship.

Could the assassin have realized how awful was the act he was about to perform, how utterly heartless the deed, methinks he would have stayed his hand at the very threshold of it. In all coming years men will seek in vain to fathom the enormity of that crime. Had this man felled by the shot of a tyrant, an oppressor, an insane frenzy to rid the world of him might have some excuse, but it was the peoples' friend whom he fell when William McKinley received the fatal wound. Himself a son of toil, his sympathies were with the toiler. No one who has seen the matchless grace and perfect ease with which he greeted such, can ever doubt that his heart was in his open hand. Every heart throb was for his countrymen. That his life should be sacrificed at such a time, just when there was abundant peace, when all the Americas were rejoicing together, is one of the inscrutable mysteries of providence. Like many others it must be left for future revelations to explain.

In the midst of our sorrow we have much to console us. He lived to see his nation greater than ever before, all sectional lines are blotted out. There is no south, no north, no east, no west. Washington saw the beginning of our national life. Lincoln passed through the night of our history and saw the dawn. McKinley beheld his country in the splendor of its noon. Truly he died in the fullness of his fame. With St. Paul he could say and with equal truthfulness, "I am now ready to be offered." The work assigned him had been well done. The nation was at peace. We had fairly entered upon an era of unparalleled prosperity; our revenues were generous. Our standing among the nations was secure. Our president was safely enshrined in the affections of a united people. It was not at him the fatal shot was fired, but at the very life of the government. His offering was vicarious. It was blood poured upon the altar of liberty. In view of these things we are not surprised to hear when this great soul passed away that he never before saw a death so peaceful, or a dying man so crowned with grandeur. Let us turn now to a brief consideration of some of the lessons that we are to learn from this sad event. The first one that will occur to us all is the old, old lesson that in the midst of life we are in death. Man goeth to his work and to his labor until the evening. He fleeth as it were a shadow and never continueth in one stay.

Our president went forth in the fullness of his strength, in his manly beauty and was suddenly smitten by the hand that brought death with it. None of us can tell what a day may bring forth. Let us therefore, remember that "no man liveth to himself," and none of us liveth to himself."

May each day's close see each day's duty done. But our last words must be spoken. Little more than four years ago we bade him good bye as he went to assume the great responsibilities to which the nation had called him. His last words as he left us "Nothing could give me greater pleasure than this farewell greeting—this evidence of your friendship and your sympathy; your good will and I am sure the prayers of all the people with whom I have lived so long and whose confidence and esteem are dearer to me than any other earthly honors. To all of us the future is as a sealed book, but if I can by official act or administration or utterance in any degree add to the prosperity and unity of our beloved country and the advancement and well being of our splendid citizenship, I will devote the best and most unselfish efforts of my life to that end.

With this thought uppermost in my mind, I reluctantly take leave of my friends and neighbors, cherishing in my heart the sweetest memories and thoughts of my old home now—and I trust, my home hereafter, so long as I live."

We hoped with him that when his work was done, freed from the burdens of his great office, crowned with the affections of a happy people, he might be permitted to close his earthly life in the home he had loved. He has ended, returned to us, but how! Borne to the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee" and placed where he first began life's struggle that the people might look and weep over so sad a home-coming.

But it was a triumphal march. How vast the procession. The nation rose and stood with uncovered head.

The people of the land are chief mourners. The nations of the earth weep with thee, but O what a victory! I do not ask you in the heat of public address, but in the calm moments of mature reflection, what other man ever had such high honors bestowed upon him by so many people? What pagant has equalled this that we look upon? We gave him to the nation but a little more than four years ago. He went out with the light of the morning upon his brow, but with his task set and the purpose to complete it. We take him back a mighty conqueror. The churchyard where his children rest, the quiet spot that suits him best—

There shall his grave be made,
And there his bones be laid
And there his countrymen shall come,
With memory proud, with pity dumb.
And strangers far and near,
For many a year and many an age,
While history on her ample page
The virtues shall enroll,
Of that paternal soul

PLACE OF HONOR

Given to Kentucky's Beautiful Floral Tribute at the Funeral of President McKinley.

CANTON, O., Sept. 19.—The place of honor in the floral decorations at the funeral of President McKinley at the Methodist Church is given to a beautiful wreath of American beauty roses, eight feet in diameter, sent by the Federal employes of the Seventh Internal Revenue district of Kentucky and the postoffices of Lexington, Frankfort, Maysville and Midway.

It is the most magnificent floral piece seen at the funeral in Washington and Canton, and is surrounded by hundreds of the most elaborate floral creations sent by foreign governments, political organizations and devoted friends of the late President.

The Lexington wreath is the central piece in the flower design, filling the pulpit, the chancel and choir loft, and it forms a frame to the large draped portrait of the President immediately below and in front of the raised pulpit from which the services were conducted.

Kentucky's floral tribute is universally admired for its taste, simplicity of design and gorgeous wealth of flowers.

The next annual meeting of the National Association of Mexican War Veterans will be held at Paris, and Col. Craddock will do the honors when his old comrades-in-arms, now growing fewer and feebler every year, assemble at Bourbon's capital.

Cards have been issued announcing the approaching marriage of Mr. Thomas A. Garrigan and Miss Romaine Mahan Thackston, of Huntington, W. Va., on Sept. 30th. Mr. Garrigan is the well-known Southeastern Traveling Passenger Agent of the Chesapeake and Ohio and Big Four railways, with headquarters at Huntington.

The Mason County Medical Society will hold its first meeting this fall on Wednesday next, Sept. 25th, at 1:30 p. m. at the G. A. R. room, postoffice building, corner Market and Third streets. Papers will be read by Drs. Taulbee and Cook. A full meeting is expected and the occasion promises to be one of unusual interest.

A novelty of any description is thoroughly appreciated, but more especially so in the amusement line, of which there are so few. The one that enjoys the distinction of possessing more novelty and interesting features, is the Gentry Bros' Famous Shows. Their trained animals have long been one of the leading attractions of the country, and nothing can be said in their praise that is not merited. Their performance is clean, entertaining and moral, and is patronized and endorsed everywhere it exhibits by the elite of the land. It will exhibit here, afternoon and night, next Monday, at Cooper's brick yard, corner Second and Union streets.

The many friends of Mr. T. F. Ellis in Maysville and Aberdeen will be pleased to learn that he is now occupying a high place in the Department of Printing and Engraving in Washington, D. C., at a salary of $4,000 per annum. He is also connected with "Die Schatzte Katz Gesellschaft,"—the Society of Black Cats—an organization to take care of strangers in the Capital City and see that they do not get lost. In this very laudable enterprise "Tite" is ably assisted by Major General Joe Sauerland and Col. Williams, of the Internal Revenue Department. The motto of the society is "We know a good thing when we see it!"

Kirk at 5c. All are to go the last half of November.

The marriage of Mr. William L. Beasley, of Bellevue, and Miss Nannie L. Rawlings, of Covington, took place at the Christian Church, Bellevue, at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday. The church was decorated with rare exotics, with festoons of ribbons suspended above the altar. The attendants were Mr. Thomas Fenlon and Miss Stella Rawlings. Elder J. B. Jones tied the nuptial knot. The young couple departed immediately after the ceremony for Norfolk, Va., and Washington, D. C. The groom is a son of Mr. Ezekiel Beasley, mail agent on the L. and N. between Maysville and Richmond. The couple will reside at 1024 Russell street, Covington.

The celebrated $50,000 slander suit of ex-Lieut. Gov. John Underwood, of Covington, against S. A. Cunningham and the publishing house of the M. E. Church, South, reached the United Circuit Court of Appeals at Covington this week. Underwood was Superintendent and Secretary of the Confederate Memorial Association, and sued because of an article printed in the Confederate Veteran, at Nashville, Tenn. He recovered a verdict of $10,000 against Cunningham and of $15,000 against the publishing house of the M. E. Church, South, and Cunningham jointly. Judge Evans overruled a new trial, the plaintiff allowing a remittus of $12,000 on the $15,000 verdict, but getting the $10,000 verdict in full.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham, of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50c. and $1. Trial bottles free at J. Jas. Wood & Son's drug store.

ARRIVED!

The new dark cottons for fall are here in the generous array you have grown to expect in this store.

PRETTY PENANGS!

The old favorites, with many new comers demanding recognition. A yard 12½c.

COVERTS AND DUCKS!

Their washing qualities are only exceeded by the pretty colors and attractive designs. Many new patterns. 12½c.

GINGHAMS.

The staunch ally of active girls and boys. Made for work and play, wash and wear. Beautiful color combinations. Hard to believe so much prettiness can be woven into cotton fabrics. Plenty of dark serviceable designs. 10c.

SCHOOL HANDKERCHIEFS!

Constant buying convinces mothers that children think handkerchiefs were made to lose. The line we show for 50c. a dozen is pretty enough and good enough to keep—and they'll "keep" too, no matter how constant the laundry journeys, but if lost the outlay is not big enough to engender worry. All white handkerchiefs, or white centers bordered with pretty colors, 50c. dozen.

PROP'S OF BEE HIVE.

MAYSVILLE'S TRIBUTE.

People of City Unite in Honoring the Memory of President McKinley.

Impressive Memorial Services at First Baptist Church Thursday Afternoon. Eulogies by Pastors of City.

With the bells of the city tolling a sad requiem, the people of Maysville united Thursday afternoon in paying loving tributes to the memory of President McKinley.

The services were held at the First Baptist Church which proved far too small to accommodate the audience that assembled. Many stood in the aisles and about the doors all during the long service and many were turned away.

Business was almost entirely suspended during the two hours the service was in progress, and the banks and some other places of business were closed during the day.

The church had been appropriately draped, a large picture of the dead Chief Executive in a frame work of crepe occupying a central place over the pulpit, with the national colors overhanging it. Over the picture, in large letters of white, appeared the President's last words, "Thy Will be Done."

The various pastors of the city and county and Hon. A. M. J. Cochran, Judge of the U. S. Circuit Court, occupied seats on the platform. Miss Berry presided at the organ. The service began at 2 p. m. and was opened, the large audience uniting in singing the hymn "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Dr. Molloy then offered a fervent prayer, the congregation uniting with him in repeating the Lord's Prayer at the close. The scriptural lessons were next read by Elder Howard T. Cree, following which the inspiring hymn "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung, Dr. Barbour offering up another prayer at its close.

The order of exercises previously announced was carried out, addresses being delivered by Rev. W. F. Taylor, Dr. Barbour, Howard T. Cree, Dr. Molloy and Rev. F. W. Harrop, the addresses being interspersed with the hymns, "Thy Will Be Done" and "Lead, Kindly Light." The last hymn was very sweetly and touchingly rendered as a solo by Mr. B. K. Muse, with organ accompaniment, and as the sad notes of the martyred President's favorite hymn filled the church many eyes were filled with tears. The speakers all paid eloquent tributes to the dead President, eulogizing him especially as a man of the highest type of the noble Christian character.

The services closed with the singing of "America," Dr. Taylor pronouncing the benediction.

C. F. Taylor, auctioneer, Thursday sold the farm of the late Mrs. Eliza C. Long, containing 120 acres, at $90 25 per acre to Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Russell, of this city.

BEAUTIFUL FLORAL TRIBUTE.

Offering From Revenue Employees in This District and of the Maysville, Lexington, Frankfort and Midway Postoffices.

Probably one of the most beautiful floral pieces sent to the hier of President McKinley was an immense floral wreath, six feet in diameter, made of lilies of the valley, tube roses and Bride roses.

On the card attached to the design was the following: "Tribute to the memory of President McKinley from the employees of the Seventh Kentucky Internal Revenue District and Lexington, Maysville, Frankfort and Midway Postoffices."

President Burris A. Jenkins, of Kentucky University, will preach at the Mayelick Christian Church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The public cordially invited to hear him.

A TRIP TO

Cincinnati

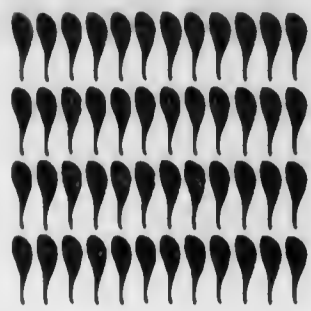

Is not necessary to procure the kind of Footwear suitable for a well-dressed woman. Some complain that the proper lasts, mode, cut and the correct weight for street and house Shoes are found wanting in the houses here.

This may, in a measure, have been true in the past; it is not so at present. A casual inspection of the lines carried by us will convince the most fastidious that they can procure, right at home, minus the cost of transportation to the city, the same Shoes to be found there.

We think we are at least entitled to the consideration of those who purchase Shoes, and ask that you inspect our stock before going out of town for what is to be had here at home.

PITHY POINTS.

Howison ought now to go into his hole and pull it in after him.

Sampson finds he has no more business at that Court of Inquiry than he had at the Santiago fight.

The Schley Court of Inquiry certainly made a good beginning when it crowded Howison off the bench.

It perhaps won't be any harder for that Court of Inquiry to find that Schley wasn't at Santiago than that Sampson was there.

It will be no easy matter for any court of inquiry to dispossess Admiral Schley of the honor already in his possession for having smashed the Spanish fleet into kindling at Santiago harbor.

It will hardly be as much ordeal to go through the Santiago fight at the Washington Navy Yard as it was to go through the original article, where Schley won imperishable honor and renown.

That Court of Inquiry will find it rather a hard job to make as small a character as Sampson fit into the uniform and rank worn by Schley for gallantry and good management at Santiago.

Big Judgment in the Noted Case Case.

(Mt. Sterling Sentinel Democrat.)

"The heirs of Leonard Case, who died twenty years ago at Cleveland, O., have been given judgment for property in that city valued at $6,000,000. Mrs. G. B. Boone, of Sideview, this county, whose maiden name was Rebecca Case, is a great niece of Leonard Case, and consequently an heir to this immense estate, her share being $32,000."

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly saved him. It's simply wonderful for burns, boils, piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25 cents. Sold by J. Jas. Wood & Son."

Alfred W. England, Jr., of Lebanon, Ky., and Miss Nannie Rogers Willett, of St. Louis, were married this week.

A very odd elderly couple reside in Mason County who keep the entire neighborhood in a broad grin with their funny freaks. In the height of flytime last summer, the old lady was milking cows in the lane, and the old man quietly sitting on the stile, smoking his corn cob pipe. One of the cows, which the old lady happened to be milking, was made such a target of by the flies, switching her long, bushy caudal appendage alternately in the bucket of milk, and in the old lady's face, that forbearance ceased to be a virtue. So, to put a stop to this nuisance, she took a stout piece of twine out of her pocket, and tying one end to the cow's tail, attached the other to her wrist. A few minutes afterwards, a frolicsome calf, which had escaped from the calf lot, came flying past, spread eagle fashion, with a discordant, ear-piercing b-a-a-a-h! The cow on which the twine experiment was being tried got frightened, and started off at a rapid trot after her calf, with an answering m-o-o-o-o-h! the old lady making a good second behind. As they passed the old man, he, misinterpreting the motives of his sprinting better half, yelled out, "Mariah, Mariah, for goodness sake, let go that ar cow's tail! Don't be so ambitious!"
